

Courtney Arntzen, Missoula Community Chaplain, Receives Prestigious Glean Fellowship

Rev. Courtney D. Arntzen, Community Chaplain in Missoula, has been selected for the prestigious START program, Glean Network's landmark, MBA-level entrepreneurship fellowship developed in partnership with Columbia Business School, which prepares faith leaders to launch new ventures designed to serve their constituents in light of the shifting American religious landscape. Rev. Arntzen will be part of the fifth cohort for this competitive national fellowship program. Founded 5 years ago, Glean Network is a growing community of faith-rooted leaders who find themselves at the crossroads of tradition and innovation, seeking to reimagine the role of faith in a world that yearns for meaning, belonging, and justice. With partners like Columbia Business School, Chaplaincy. Innovation Lab, and a number of national religious denominations and organizations, Glean Network has quickly grown to national prominence. With hundreds of leaders trained, over 100 ventures incubated, and over $12 million raised by its graduates, Glean Network has become a center for the reimagining of faith, and a key training ground for visionary leaders like Rev. Arntzen.

Glean Network is a sponsored program of Clal, a Jewish think-tank focused on pluralism, innovation, and the future of faith in America. To interview any of the fellows or Glean Network's Founding Director, Rabbi Elan Babchuck, please contact Rabbi Elan Babchuck at elan@clal.org.
